Ministry Update

It's been a busy month since my last update. The first college mixer was a fantastic learning experience. Eight college/career young adults from four churches came and ate pizza while playing a rousing game of Catch Phrase. I received a better idea of how best to bring these students together and what challenges are there. Immediately following that party I headed to Southern California for the On Target Evangelism Conference. There, one of the illustrations that resonated deeply with me was the image of a carousel. colored, painted, carved piece of wood moving up and down and in circles without getting anywhere? It's stuck with me and I'm beginning to look at all that I do with this standard. After On Target I went to Riverside and raised some additional monthly support and began thinking of different ways to approach my mission field and ways to get people involved. One new plan is to start a ministry blog in addition to my monthly newsletter to discuss ministry ideas, things I'm learning and reading, as well as what I'm discovering about working with youth and young adults. If you have feedback on this please let me know. Also, I'm taking ideas for a title.

Please Pray

- I would have more opportunities to share this ministry with churches and individuals
- That the monthly funding will be provided to enable me to focus full-time on the ministry
- Sac State Administration would have open hearts to allowing me on campus to survey their students.

Needs:

Gift Cards for surveying students

Please pass this newsletter on to your friends, family, and churches so we can grow the influence of this ministry

Personal Thoughts

Personal Needs

- Consistent Financial Provision
- Ministry Partner
- Strength to push through
- Prayers for my family

For the past year I have been on a wild roller coaster ride of living 100% by the grace of God. One of my dear friends from CBU always impressed me because she seemed to live this way all the time. I used to pray that God would give me the courage to live for Him all the time and be able to pick up and go wherever He wanted just like her. I still admire her, but even more now, because I understand just how much is involved living this way.

“When the Holy Spirit shows up unexpected and uninvited, that’s the best time because it’s His timing and His plan. So, when is Jesus going to be more than enough for you?” Bob Roberts

The Holy Spirit showed up in my life three and a half years ago, uninvited and moved me to Sacramento to do what I thought was the expected for my life, teaching. Then a year and a half ago He showed up unexpectedly and guided me to the mission of my life, collegiate ministry. As I’ve embarked down this path and am living off of the grace of God I have grown closer to Him, cried a lot of tears, seen some remarkable things and come to realize that Jesus is more than enough for me in everything! I don’t have to fret or hide or give up because Jesus is my Bread of Life, Living Water, and the Air I Breathe. He is my Beginning and End and I will be able to bear all things in all seasons with Him as my Foundation! Is He yours and is He more than enough for you?
